2021 Advisors of the Year

Darrell Hairston, North Carolina A&T State University

Friday Night Keynote Address:

Keep Giving: Time, Talents, and Theories

College students across the world do much more than read, write, study, and stress. They are essential to the fabric of society. When students use their most valuable resources, they help enrich the lives of others. As ALD scholars, there has never been a more important time than now to make the world a better place.

Darrell Hairston has served as ALD advisor at North Carolina A&T State University since 2013. During his tenure, the chapter has had four Trow Undergraduate Scholarship Recipients and one Graduate Fellowship Recipient. The chapter won the prestigious Order of the Torch award in 2014, as well as chapter membership awards in 2021 (Delta Bronze) and 2018 (Lambda Silver and Delta Gold). He also was recognized with an ALD Executive Director Advisor Award in 2018.

Reatha Cox, Northwestern State University

Saturday Night Keynote Address:

Why I Love Advising ALD

Alpha Lambda Delta is one of my favorite groups to advise. I'm often asked why, and the reason is simple: ALD caliber of students and the benefits ALD offers are something special.

Reatha Cox has served as ALD advisor at Northwestern State University since 2010. During her tenure, the chapter has had seven Trow Undergraduate Scholarship Recipients and one Stemler Study Abroad Scholarship Recipient. The chapter won the prestigious Order of the Torch award in 2018, as well as the Maintaining the Flame award in 2020 and 2021 for continued excellence. Cox also was recognized with an ALD Executive Director Advisor Award in 2016.
